Second Year-Lecture Six

Have and Have got

Have got is used in an informal context.

Have expresses long-standing possession. (long-term possession)

Have got expresses mostly recent possession.

Usages of Have and Have got

Examples: I have a luxury car.(formal context, long-standing possession)

I have got a luxury car. (informal context, recent possession)

They have a final exam tomorrow. (formal context, long notice)

They have got a test tomorrow. (informal context, short notice)

I have a terrible pain in my neck.(formal context, long-standing possession=chronic pain))

I have got a terrible pain in my neck.(informal context, recent case).

How many brothers do you have?(formal context, long-standing possession).

Have you heard the news? Little John has got a new brother. (informal context, recent possession)

Congratulations Tom! I see you have got a promotion. (informal context, recent possession).

You are a lucky man Tom! You have a very well-paying job.

I have a good friend. (formal context, long-term possession)

I have got a good friend. (informal context, recent possession)

Generation Gap

Generation Gap: It is the time span that separates generations in terms of mentality, vision of life, and notion of future.

Three things that young people think about older people are:

1. Older people are old-fashioned in their way of thinking.
2. Older people are less adaptable to modern trends in terms of technology, fashion, and they stick to the same daily routine(tenor).
3. Older people lack physical energy(stamina).

Three things that older people think about young people are:

1. Older people thing that young people are hasty and reckless.
2. Older people think that young people are inconsiderate.
3. Older people think that young people are night owls.

4. Older people think that young people are the leaders of tomorrow(i.e. Young people are the hope and expectancy of the nation.).

Cuisine: art of cooking

Iraqi cuisine

Lebanese Cuisine

American Cuisine

Italian Cuisine

Syrian Cuisine